

Q: What's the difference between turmeric and curcumin?

Turmeric is the plant that provides curcumin, the clinically studied and effective compound. A typical turmeric root contains about 2–5% curcumin, so taking an unstandardized, powdered turmeric root product means that very large amounts would be required to get a beneficial amount of curcumin. Additionally, standard curcumin extracts are poorly absorbed from the gastrointestinal tract. That's why BCM-95[®] curcumin is blended with turmeric oils in a patented process to enhance absorption. While turmeric is indeed a good spice, the high absorption BCM-95[®] curcumin extract used in CuraMed[®] is a better choice for health benefits.

BCM-95[®] CURCUMIN

You've probably heard about curcumin—the powerful compound from turmeric.

Maybe you've even tried turmeric capsules or standard curcumin extracts. But did you know that turmeric only provides about 2–5% curcumin, and that standard curcumin is tough for the body to absorb? That's why they fail to deliver the benefit you desire.
